BOP ADVICES

One should always strive for the aid of Allah (SWT) by having "tawakkul". Find comfort in the fact that as "mu'mineen", we have the gift that no one else has in this "dunya". If one relies on "الوكيل" in every affair, nothing will be able to stop His provisions, support and protection. He is the most kind, the all-mighty, the provider, the sustainer, all-aware, all-powerful, the protector and the supporter. He is Allah. And whoever puts his trust in Allah then He will suffice him.

BASEL

KARIM

We need to change the way we view being successful from career-oriented success to Islam-oriented success. This is something to keep in mind during college for me and any other Muslims graduating high school or college. Islam comes first, and it should be the focus of our lives and our affairs. One day we're all going to die, and we certainly won't take our money or our position to the grave. This doesn't mean it's bad to pursue great things in your career, but don't let that take precedence over your deen.

I speak from personal experience coming to the masjid constantly will bring you great things in life. It allows you not only to create a great relationship with Allah (SWT) but also with trust worthy people who will look out for you and never stab you in the back. Those are the people who will one day stand for you and attest for you on the Day of Judgment.

AMR

Don't forget to say "bismillah" before any decision you make. It'll bless your decisions. In college we tend to get stressed about our busy lives, but saying "bismillah" before everything reminds you that the most important thing amongst all of that stress is Allah.

It is important for everyone to consider but especially for the graduates, as for our whole lives we've had our parents to watch over us but as we all move away, and become independent, the responsibility will be completely on us to make sure we are acting as Allah would want us to.
